However, if a vitamin B2 deficiency does occur, symptoms like a sore throat, mouth or lip sores, hair loss, and/or skin disorders may result. Otherwise, no side effects have been linked with excess riboflavin intake – nor has the Food and Nutrition Board established an upper limit for riboflavin intake. Some medications can affect how your body reacts to, absorbs, or breaks down any riboflavin you consume. If you want to download you have to send your own contributions. By consuming riboflavin regularly, you can maintain healthy hair and skin – and contribute to the health of your eyes and liver. Moreover, one of the more unique functions of riboflavin is that it combats some of the effects of aging, particularly memory loss. Unused riboflavin passes out of the body in the urine. From birth to the age of six months, infants should get about 0.3 mg of riboflavin per day. Additionally, a long-term riboflavin deficiency can lead to anemia. Daily Dosage Recommendations The recommended daily dosages for riboflavin vary based on both age and sex. A drug called probenecid, which is used to treat gout, can increase the amount of riboflavin in your body, while certain medications taken by folks with depression can decrease riboflavin levels. Be sure to speak with your healthcare provider before adding a riboflavin supplement to your daily routine. Side Effects Because vitamin B2 is natural and water-soluble, it doesn't remain in the body if it is not immediately needed. There are also more detailed tests for Beginner/Elementary, Pre-Intermediate/Intermediate and Upper Intermediate/Advanced-level students, to help you determine which level will best suit your class. To ensure the highest level of riboflavin, store your foods (especially those mentioned above) in opaque containers and keep them well away from any light source. It is also involved in the necessary breakdown of fats and certain medications. In this section, you will find placement tests to help you find which level of Straightforward your students should be using. These placement tests are Word documents, so you can download them and then edit the questions to suit your students' language learning requirements if necessary. Here's your answer! If you eat a varied and healthy diet of lean meats, plenty of vegetables, nuts, legumes, and low-fat dairy products, you probably won't need to take a riboflavin supplement. The first test on this page is a general level test for Straightforward, and includes questions linked to the grammar from the Student's Books. We're delving into just why this vitamin is so important to one's health. What Does Vitamin B2 Do? We all need vitamin B2, or riboflavin, to keep our bodies functioning properly. Riboflavin is involved in the production of our DNA, and works to support our important nerve and blood cells. From the ages of one to three years old, children should consume about 0.5 mg of vitamin B2 a day; from ages four to eight, about 0.6 mg/day; and from ages nine to 13, about 0.9 mg/day. Once children reach the age of 14, their recommended dosages vary based on sex. Photo Courtesy: The Good Brigade/DigitalVision/Getty Images That's not all that riboflavin does for your body, however. When high amounts of vitamin B2 are consumed, the urine may become a yellow-orange color. If you are supplementing your intake, keep in mind that the recommended daily allowance for riboflavin is 1.1 mg for women and 1.3 mg for men. But, for starters, riboflavin, along with other B vitamins, is found in a wide range of foods, including: Lean beef, pork, and organ meats (kidney and liver) Eggs Nuts and legumes Milk and other dairy products Green leafy vegetables Mushrooms Many breads, cereals and pastas are fortified with extra riboflavin, and some enriched flours have higher levels of vitamin B2. In other cases, vitamin B2 is added to certain products. Each test has 50 questions, with one point available for each correct answer. So, if your diet is lacking in riboflavin, you may want to try adding in some of these fortified options. Photo Courtesy: Janos Mladonyczkai/EyeEm/Getty Images Studies have found that riboflavin can be destroyed by light, so if you store your food in a glass container, it may no longer contain the full health benefits of vitamin B2. Page 3 Welcome to ESL Printables, the website where English Language teachers exchange resources: worksheets, lesson plans, activities, etc. From seven months to 12 months, that amount should increase to 0.4 mg/day. (Ever wonder why your milk comes in an opaque jug instead of a glass milk bottle? These have been updated and expanded but will be suitable for both the original and the second edition of Straightforward. As always, consult with your health care provider(s) before making any changes to your diet. Deficiency Symptoms Because of its abundance in common foods, riboflavin deficiency is very rare in the United States. For women, the recommendation is 1 mg/day from ages 14 to 18, and then 1.1 mg/day from the age of 19 on. From the age of 14, men should consume about 1.3 mg/day. Clicking on each test below will open a .zip file with both the tests and the answers. Vitamin B2, more commonly known as riboflavin, is one such group. Our collection is growing every day with the help of many teachers. Levels are then determined by the number of points your students score. Finally, riboflavin has also been linked to healthy reproductive functioning, so if you're planning to start a family soon, you may want to speak to a healthcare provider to ensure you are getting an adequate amount of vitamin B2 in your diet. Food Sources of Vitamin B2 Like many vitamins and minerals, riboflavin occurs naturally in some foods. Supplements of B2 or B vitamin complex generally provide 1.3 mg/day, thus ensuring that 100% of the daily requirement is met. Because meat and dairy products provide most of our riboflavin intake, vegans and vegetarians who avoid dairy products might need to take a supplement. Those who are pregnant or breastfeeding might also decide to take a supplement to meet the additional needs of the fetus or infant. Riboflavin also helps keep your nervous system and immune system working properly. So, what are riboflavin's properties and uses? And, when all else fails, it can be taken as a dietary supplement.
